Marshall Electronics Launches Warranty Extension for LCD Monitors

Marshall monitor owners may choose to extend existing one year warranty to two years at no charge.

El Segundo, CA - Marshall Electronics, leading manufacturer of rack-mount LCD monitors and broadcast solutions, announces a free warranty extension on all its professional LCD monitors. The offer extends the regular one year warranty to two full years from the purchase date. The extended warranty is an added value to Marshall owners and prospective buyers. The program launches November 1, 2013.

“The extended warranty lets customers know we’re confident in our products and we are backing that up by doubling the warranty protection for our customers. Our commitment to quality has never been greater and we’re willing to back it up,” says Russ Walker, Marshall Director of Strategic Planning & Business Development. “As we move into 4K and other higher end monitor technologies, we want customers to have peace of mind when making Marshall purchases. The extended warranty program is also another way to give our customers more value for their money. That remains a top priority at Marshall.”

Marshall Electronics has recently entered the market of higher end 2K/4K LCD monitors with its QVW-2710 and QVW-2410. The extended warranty offer will be available on these products as well as all other Marshall LCD monitors including camera-top, rack-mount and tabletop monitors.

A warranty extension form will be packaged with all new Marshall monitors shipped after November 1, 2013. Marshall customers may simply return a completed registration form or register for the free warranty extension online at http://www.lcdracks.com/support/product_registration.php within 1 year of purchase. The two year warranty period begins at date of purchase. Warranty registration is required to obtain the second year of product warranty coverage.

Marshall also offers three, four, and five year warranty extensions for purchase. Contact support@marshallelectronics.net for more information on warranty extension options.
